I'm going to amend what I just sent you. I apologize. I want to use the following:

(b)(3) NatSecAct
(b)(5)

The changes this time being the deletion of the lined-out sentence and the slightly amended new sentence in red.

Thanks,

As I mentioned in an earlier note, thank you and your colleagues all for your work on The Interrogator. I appreciate your quick response, and I always have understood that you have a task that will sometimes set you at odds with prospective writers. I do not envy you your positions. Please let your colleagues know that I thank them.

I have one sentence I truly must add to the text of The Interrogator. I have recently learned something to which I must allude. [   ] But, I must add this last sentence or the book could, by some, appear to mislead, when I take the greatest care to be accurate.

Please confirm this change is okay. I must send it to the printers immediately.

Start text (addition in red):

(b)(3) NatSecAct

Many thanks.

I look forward to hearing from you.
